How do current political events affect the lives of writers in Africa?

Living in vibrantly multi-lingual cultures, how do they choose the languages in which they write? And how do creative writers contribute to collective remembrance and collective forgetting in Africa?

These are some of the questions that will be discussed in an informal roundtable setting by the 2017 International Writers Program Residents from Africa.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18

12:00 PM - 1:30 PM

UCC 2390

Individuals with disabilities are encouraged to attend all University of Iowa-sponsored events. If you are a person with a disability who requires an accommodation in order to participate in this program, please contact James Giblin in advance at james-giblin@uiowa.edu (319) 335-2302.

This event is sponsored by the African Studies Program and International Programs.