INFUSING GLOBAL PERSPECTIVES INTO YOUR CLASSROOM

You may soon be asked to include global perspectives in your classes in order to meet Iowa's standards based requirements. This year's Global Education Institute for Teachers will help you incorporate global learning into your classes, and is applicable to all content areas and disciplines, from writing and science to social studies. In addition to developing an overview of global education, teachers will work together with mentors in writing curriculum during class sessions. Each student will be required to submit an application paper on how they plan to infuse a global perspective into their curriculum. Attendees will take home many exciting new resources and easily accessible materials, and will finish with a ready-to-go curriculum outline for their classrooms.

THE COURSE WILL FOCUS ON THE FOLLOWING:

- Application of global perspectives in teaching and learning
- "State of the planet" awareness, intercultural competence, knowledge of global systems, and awareness of human choices across the curriculum
- Engagement in the world
- Citizenship in a global age
- How to address the Iowa Core 21st Century Skills on Global Literacy and Culture

THE COURSE WILL ALSO INCLUDE:

- Lectures and group discussions with scholars in the academic disciplines on how to relate a global perspective in specific curricular areas
- Small-group working sessions on curriculum design and lesson development
- Use of digital technology for increased global understanding
